HISTORICAL BACKGROUND OF THE COLLEGE

For its educational background, Jaunpur is known to be Shiraz-E-Hind from the time of Mughal Empire. After the first war of Independence in 1857, the Indian Muslims lost almost everything. They were not only deprived of the rein of power but even their cultural, religious and academic identity was threatened and for a long time they remained an eye-sore for the British Imperialism and were regarded as fifth columnist. With a view to raising the Muslims from darkness 'JAUNPUR ANJUMAN-E-ISLAMIA' came into existence in 1943 with the sole purpose of awakening the Muslim community and inculcating in them an interest for education and learning. This Anjuman-E-Islamia established a primary school in the Atala Masjid Campus which once was a 'Madarsa' where the great Emperor Sher Shah had completed his primary education. Rising from primary education to the position of an intermediate college, this institution shot up into prominence as a Post Graduate College in 1994. Now it is known as MOHAMMAD HASAN P.G. COLLEGE, JAUNPUR. The college is self-financed and it has so far received financial assistance neither from the public sector nor from the private one. Even then, the college has retained its identity and remains true to its ideals. The following is a resume of the progress and achievements the college has made during this short span of time:
